English as "something in a group, as in "plural opposites" (as in "water is something in a group that differs from its liquid opposite water" can be translated to "water, liquid is something that differs from water") It means "something that has more than one of something" Where in English "more than one of something" means "each of something", "every of something", "several of something" For example, "more than one of something" in English may mean: 1. The same number of positive numbers in two different sets. (ex: A = { 2, 3, 4, 5, 7 }, B = { 3, 5, 9, 6, 7 } - "5 is the only element in B that is a member of A") 2. There are at least two copies of a single item in a set of items. (ex: A = { banana, apple }, B = { banana, apple, apple } - "there are two bananas in set B") 3. An example of "plural" from Chinese is: 570a42141b
